"The Wisdom of Resistance"

Jim Dolan

"Resistance without wisdom simply becomes a sense of rage without purpose. Leonardo da Vinci tells us that "It is easier to resist at the beginning than at the end." The German people of the 1930's discovered that truism too late. Will we do the same? It seems so, doesn't it?"

Jim is a well-known artist, but he's also a fine speaker and a member of our fellowship.

January 11

"Resisting Resistance?"

Carrie Arnold

Sometimes pushing back seems like the only way to resist. But sometimes it's just too hard to be hard. How can we practice resistance in softer ways? Can gentleness be resistance? Let's talk about it.

Carrie was a jail chaplain and currently has a house church. She's a regular speaker at LUUF.

January 18

"The Positive Power of Negative Thinking"

Rev. Tony Larsen

In keeping with our monthly theme of resistance, Tony's sermon will be about the power of saying no, even when the rest of the world is asking for a yes.

Tony is a retired UU minister who comes to us regularly.

January 25

"Practicing Resistance Without Losing Ourselves"

Pat Hanson

"Practicing resistance means discerning how to resist without being consumed by the struggle or press-ganged into someone else's script. Resistance is not simply opposition. It is a disciplined, communal practice that requires both shared burden and wise discernment—knowing when to stand, when to step back, and when to avoid participation altogether."

Pat owns New Day Resources, and he deals with Trauma-informed Individual and Couple's Coaching, Leadership, and Team Development, Group Coaching, Organizational & Church Consulting, and Speaking at Events and Retreats.

He's also played at the Door County and Mequon UUs. He lives in Sheboygan, but he assures me his car is reliable!

Rights of Nature News and Legislation

On November 15, 2025, about 100 eastern Wisconsin voters attended a session on the Rights of Nature at Woodland Dunes. Wisconsin legislatures are currently considering a ban on local efforts to assign legal rights to natural entities with a goal of ensuring nature's ability to be healthy, robust, and resilient.

Sen. Steve Nass, R-Whitewater, and Rep. Joy Goeben, R-Hobart, introduced the bill. The legislation would prevent a city, village, town or county from passing "rights of nature" ordinances that grant legal rights to protect against pollution or maintain a healthy ecosystem.

GOP lawmakers have said there's a growing national trend of local governments providing legal standing to rivers, forests and ecosystems. More than 30 local governments in at least 10 states have adopted or attempted to pass such measures, according to the bill's authors

Nass said rights of nature laws are a direct threat to private property rights during a hearing before the Senate's transportation and local government committee.

"As countries around the world and other local governments in America begin to place nature above human beings, it is important that this be stopped in Wisconsin before it goes any further than a non-binding resolution," Nass said. "Nature should not supersede human beings, and nature has no inalienable rights like man."

In Wisconsin, Nass noted that Green Bay moved to draft a resolution over the summer that would recognize area wetlands and waterways possess the "right to clean water," including the Fox and East rivers.

Green Bay was following in the footsteps of Milwaukee County. In 2023, the county passed a "rights of nature" resolution that supports bestowing rights to waterways there with a goal of "ensuring human activities do not interfere with nature and its ability to be healthy, robust, and resilient."

Wisconsin tribes have also taken steps to recognize the rights of nature. In 2018, the Ho-Chunk Nation became the first tribe in the country to amend its constitution to include the rights of nature. In 2020, the Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin passed a resolution to protect the legal rights of the Menominee River.

David Liners with the Rights of Nature Wisconsin movement said such measures are meant to protect the Earth for future generations. He noted that corporations also have some of the same rights of people. Under corporate personhood, companies can hold property and sue or be sued, according to the Brennan Center for Justice.

"The rights of nature is just simply saying we need the natural world to have some standing to be protected," Liners said. "It's not absolute rights." Liners said such measures don't give the natural world more rights than people. But Nass said granting the same rights of people to nature could open landowners to litigation, saying supporters want to expand the rights of nature to stop development.

Republicans say states like Florida and Ohio have passed laws limiting the legal rights of nature. They have also pointed to a 1972 Supreme Court ruling that found the Sierra Club lacked standing in its legal challenge to a U.S. Forest Service decision to develop a game refuge. GOP lawmakers argue only people or recognized legal entities have standing, saying rights of nature policies threaten a "dangerous shift" in legal precedent.

In October, a group of Democratic state lawmakers unveiled "rights of nature" legislation, saying that natural resources like lakes and forests should be given their own legal standing. As part of the legislative package, a joint resolution urged the Legislature to recognize and protect the rights of nature and not pass laws that prevent local governments from adopting such measures.

More than 500 rights of nature laws or policies have been passed worldwide. In 2008, Ecuador became the first country to grant legal rights to nature in its constitution, and Bolivia also recognized the importance of protecting nature. In 2019, a ruling by the top court in Bangladesh granted rivers the same rights as people.

Adult Activities

Many U.U. Members are already actively involved in one or more of the local charity organizations providing food and shelter to those in need. So, in that spirit, the adult activities Committee decided to sponsor the BLESSING BOX at Jefferson School during the month of January. Specific information on this project will be forthcoming.

Book Chat will be meeting at the Fellowship on Monday, January 19, 2026, at 1:30 to discuss AN IMMENSE WORLD, by Ed Yong. One needn't have read the whole book to join the conversation. It is a brilliant book that inspires awe and wonder at this world we inhabit with so many other remarkable creatures and certainly gives solid argument for the responsibility we have to honor all habitats! Come join the conversation, and bring suggestions for future books to read!

The New Year will bring new and continuing activities for the Membership, so, stay tuned! The Adult activities committee will meet in January to finalize first quarter 2026 activities. Watch the Chalice Email group for upcoming activates, as well as in the February LUUF newsletter.

Love At The Center: Reimagining the World As It Could Be:

Mon, Jan 19, 2026— Mon, Feb 16, 2026

At a time when fear, violence, and extraction dominate our politics and our planet, we practice another way. We believe love is not fragile; it is fierce. It grounds our organizing, fuels our imagination, and sustains our communities. Over five weeks, we will move through a journey from imagination to action, rooting our freedom dreams in faith and bringing them to life in our world.

Each week, we will have a written reflection from Side With Love staff; a conversation with a UU theologian; a multigenerational family activity; reflection questions for journaling; a meditative body practice; and a coloring sheet connected to the weekly theme.

The weekly themes are:

Week 1: Reimagining Thriving

Week 2: Grounding in Context

Week 3: Mobilizing Action

Week 4: Nurturing Community

Week 5: Exploring Possibilities

Hope House of Manitowoc County is celebrating 20 years of service to the homeless families. We started in 2005 as a rotating homeless shelter from church to church. This transferred into a location at St Boniface Church for several years. In 2017 the Board made the decision to have a permanent site at 1000 South 35th Street, Manitowoc.

We now have room for 35 individuals in our house. We have common areas: living room, dining room, playroom and laundry room. We are very pleased to welcome and assist our homeless residents through case management, life skills training, service searches and other independent living preparations. Their school age children are in school during the day, which gives the parent time to work and time to reach out to services and participate in case management.

As a 90-day program we assist, and move the family into independence as soon as they are ready. The barrier to independence is the availability of housing. Our $20 for 20 years of service campaign will help us provide services and items needed by our families.

Extension is the Wisconsin Idea in action!

Extending the boundaries of the university to the boundaries of the state

Extension
UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON

The University of Wisconsin-Madison, Division of Extension's outreach creates key connection with families, farms, communities, businesses, nonprofit organizations, government and more. We support local partners, volunteers and leaders to take action and serve as role models in their communities, and we make sure Wisconsinites have the latest research, best practices, and educational opportunities.

Extension has six institutes that work in six different areas of programming.

- Agriculture
- Community Development
- Human Development & Relationships
- Health & Well-Being
- Natural Resources
- Positive Youth Development

Each of the 6 Institutes has a director and program managers that provide and support educators with research, resources, and the network to be effective in the communities where they work.

Educators reach out to connect and meet with community partners to assess needs or gaps in the community. They identify needs and prioritize issues in collaboration with local partners, they determine common themes and then prioritize their plan of work based on the needs they hear.

Educators work on the local needs and trends with local partners. Through their state network the local needs and trends are often determined to be statewide or regional trends. Teams of Extension educators, program managers, state specialists and institute directors will work together to address complex/larger issues making program development more efficient. Extension Educators bring the research, knowledge and resources of the University of Wisconsin to your community.

How does Extension come to life in Manitowoc County?

In Manitowoc County, three of the six Extension program or institute areas are represented and implemented in the county.
